Erasmus+ KA 2 Project “Success through technical language” Project Results

The vocational training system has proven to be a successful strategy for securing good skilled labour. Many of the youths and young adults with or without a migrant background are about to enter the vocational training system or are already in vocational training.

However, in specific in-company or school-based training contexts, many learners are unable to grasp and understand technical and complex tasks and work instructions due to their low level of literacy. This leads to challenges for all those involved in vocational training, often resulting in trainees dropping out of training or failing their exams.

In the “Success through technical language” project, vocational training institutions from Austria, the Netherlands and Germany developed and piloted concepts to meet these requirements with the aim of qualifying skilled professionals. We would like to invite you to the
